L.P. Hartley's 'The Go-Between' takes place in the long hot Summer of 1900, and tells of how young Leo, staying with Marcus, a school friend, at the aristocratic Brandham Hall, begins to act as a messenger between Ted, the farmer, and Marian, Marcus's beautiful young sister. Leo narrates the events in 1952, as a mature adult looking back.

The Go-Between has elements in common with the works of D.H. Lawrence (such as Lady Chatterley's Lover) and Thomas Hardy. Hartley's book resembles a bildungsroman—a novel that specifically chronicles someone's journey from youth to adulthood—but shows the way that trauma can interrupt growing up.
